

LIGHT TO GREEK KING STARTS RIOT IN CHURCH

Venezuelists and Royalists Battle
With Chairs and Fists and
One Draws Pistol.

King Constantine of Greece and Prime Minister Venizelos, both by proxy, led a battle royal last night in the Greek Church at No. 64 Schermerhorn Street, Brooklyn, which was transferred to-day to the Adams Street Police Court. It was election night for the pastorate, and when the Rev. Stefano Papamarcos, an ardent adherent of Venizelos, conducted the preliminary religious service without saying the customary "Long live the King!" John Venich of No. 1757 Shore Road, Fort Hamilton, a Royalist, said it for him.

Things began to happen immediately. John Panagouloulas, an export merchant, of No. 409 East Fifty-first Street, Manhattan, is said to have punched Venich in the nose. After that chairs, pictures and flats flew all over the place. Some one drew a revolver and is reported to have threatened the pastor.

Somewhat else telephoned the Adams Street Police Station and eight policemen with ten members of the Home Defense League rushed to the church. They arrested Venich. He was held in $1,000 bail in court to-day for examination on Saturday, charged with felonious assault. Pastor Papamarcos was elected last night after the din had subsided, but the Royalists said to-day that the meeting had been "packed" and that there would be another election to-morrow night.

SUNDAY SCHOOLS TURN OUT.

125,000 Brooklyn Children to Hold

Rallies if Weather Holds Parade.

The rain brought a gloomy outlook for to-day's eighty-eighth annual parade of the Brooklyn Sunday School Union. It had been arranged, however, that if the weather was stormy late in the afternoon the marching of all except the Prospect Park Division should be replaced by exercises in various Sunday schools. The Prospect Park contingent arranged to parade next Saturday afternoon.

Gov. Whitman, Mayor Mitchell, Billy Sunday and a host of borough, city, military and judicial officials, were on the list of dignitaries to review the 125,000 children in the Twenty-seventh District parade scheduled for this afternoon. William Hamilton Childs entertained the reviewers and other guests of the union at the Montauk Club.

HELD FOR DE PAOLO ESCAPE.

Two Keepers in Bed When Bail

Witness Got Away. Is Charge.

John P. Dorsey of No. 450 West One Hundred and Fifty-first Street, and Michael Gill of No. 650 Bergen Street, Brooklyn, keepers in the House of Detention, were to-day held for trial in Special Sessions by Magistrate Krotel for allowing the escape of De Paolo, a witness in the Hoff murder case, to escape on May 26.

Inmates of House of Detention testified that Dorsey and Gill, instead of remaining on guard the night De Paolo escaped, went to bed taking advantage of this. De Paolo climbed out of a window and down a fire escape. Both men pleaded not guilty.

For Women—DRESSES FOR Summer-Wear Mourning

Cool and Dainty

Three Styles in Jap Silk

One has a deep Russian blouse effect with deep hems on both blouse and skirt. Fluted silk ruffles trim the upper edge of these hems, and also the neck and cuffs of the blouse. There is a collar of white as well as of black.

Price $11.74

Another has a panel front from neck to hem, crossed by a double sash. The skirt is shirred from a deep yoke.

The third is a plain blouse model with covered buttons for trimming and skirt pockets in the regular youthful style.

Two Styles in Voile

One voile dress is very much pleated, which gives it charming long lines. Adding to this effect are two straps of wide faille silk ribbon from the shoulder to well below the waistline. The same ribbon forms a belt.

Another voile model is in a fancy stripe. It has a Russian blouse effect with a decorative band of faille silk ribbon, and a vestee, cuffs and collar of plain voile.
